Snap that ball and go for a pass, I'll throw it strong, straight, and true.

Run your route and trust in my skills, I will get that ball right to you.

I am the quarterback, and this is my team to lead and to guide.

Come to my huddle and listen to the plan. Together we'll enjoy the ride.

Where are my blockers, the ones who protect me? Without you, I'm weak.

Keep the defense at bay, away from the pocket, and I'll make sure we don't see defeat.

I'll give the ball to my running back and watch as he takes it up field.

Stay on course, do not go off the grid, follow your blocks. They are your shield.

The wide receivers run down the field as fast as they can. They are the true believers.

The ball is released, and it soars like an eagle, right into the open hands of the receiver.

The defense is trying to stop our progress. They tackle and trip, they push and they toss.

It is their job to track down the ball and tear it away, to stop all our plays and make it a loss.
